

Remote bus stations are often very difficult or impossible to develop. The costs of cable installations are significant.

Bus stops can be easily and inexpensively illuminated with self-sufficient solar lights.

An on demand lighting control by using motion detectors also helps to save power - making light always present when light is needed.